

UC Santa Barbara Department of Geography

What about grad school?

The value of a Ph.D., the nature of graduate school work, how to apply and get in, and what UCSB is all about

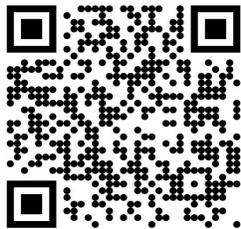

Why the UCSB Geography Ph.D. program?

UCSB Geography is internationally recognized as one of the best Departments of Geography in the world. Our vision is to lead the integration of natural, social, and information sciences to solve problems of people and the environment. Research-focused training is provided for those seeking an interdisciplinary understanding of the world. Our graduate program prepares students for careers in science, technology, government, teaching, and business.

Contact us & more Information

Find out more about how to apply, scan this:

Looking for more information on the application process and funding opportunities?

Considering graduate school? Not sure what a Geography Ph.D. is like, and how it can enhance your career? Want to know how to put together a competitive application? Simply want to hear about options? We invite you to visit our website using the QR code or reach out to us with any questions..

Please contact grad_advisor@geog.ucsb.edu if you have any questions about the program and funding opportunities.

What are the funding options?

- TA assistantship
- Graduate Student Researcher (GSR) appointments
- Fellowships

For details, see our website (the QR code above)

What types of research we do?

